09:00-12:15

In local authorities across Scotland there are many ways in which mediation and the skills of mediation are being used to help resolve and prevent homelessness. A great part of the focus of this work is with young people. The ways in which mediation is used is varied and different models have been developed reflecting the size of councils and the skills they have available internally. This seminar will include speakers from Cyrenians Conflict Resolution Service, East Lothian Council and Community Safety Glasgow.

Scottish Centre for Conflict Resolution

The SCCR is a national resource promoting and supporting best practice in mediation, family conflict resolution and early intervention. We aim to improve relationships and lives, and reduce youth homelessness by reducing the biggest cause - family relationship breakdown.

Scottish Mediation

Scottish Mediation is the professional body for mediators in Scotland. We are funded to promote a wider understanding of the appropriate use of mediation in conflict management and prevention, create and encourage links between mediators and Scottish public, private, voluntary and community organisations and provide access to mediation services.

This event is open to anyone with an interest in understanding early intervention and mediation, including:

- Mediators
- Scottish Government
- Local Authorities
- Third Sector Organisations
- Housing Staff
